Rhipsalis campos-portoana

BRAZILIAN RHIPSALIS

Rhipsalis campos-portoana is a delightful house plant, in a permanent “bad hair day” way.

Spectacular, long pale-green round stems first shoot up in the air from the base. Then as stems mature and lengthen, they dangle down in an attractive jungle tangle. Becoming lime green at the tips and darker green at the base.

So the whole jungle tangle is attractively shaded.

Then small creamy white, star-like flowers blossom at the end of the dangling stems during spring. Followed by red berries in summer..

Rhipsalis campos-portoana is an epiphytic jungle cactus.

Meaning it grows on the trunks and branches of the warm, moist forests of Brazil, and loves to dangle in the air.

So it makes a wonderful indoor plant for a hanging basket or on a high shelf.

In a well-lit, warm position, but out of direct sunlight.

In more tropical climates it will also thrive outdoors in a warm, moist, protected spot. With filtered light out of direct sunlight.

Rhipsalis are jungle plants and are therefore not frost hardy.

They enjoy consistent moisture without being wet through the heat of summer. While remaining slightly drier in the winter.

Pot into a very free draining potting mix, such as orchid mix.

Rhipsalis campos-portoana revels in summer humidity, so it really appreciates being misted from a sprayer during hot or dry weather.

Quality fertilizer, such as Powerfeed, can be applied in spring and autumn.

We recommend to water in with Seasol at planting. Then follow up with Seasol foliar feeds to strengthen plant growth, health and resistance.

Rhipsalis campos-portoana can be shipped to all states from Di's Delightful Plants - one of Australia's largest on-line nursery and mail order plant services.
